Subject: RE: Stone Pillars on River Knolls Dr.

Debbie,

I apologize for my delay on this. It took me some time to find information. The pillars were originally part of Bare Acres-Henry Strater Estate, which today is 5609 River Knolls Drive. The information I found says, "Estate developed on site of earlier farm for Henry Strater of Strater Brothers Tobacco Company, beginning in 1905. Approximately forty-acre property was laid out and landscaped with assistance of Olmsted Brothers. Property was subdivided and developed beginning in 1956 as River Knolls. House sits back from bluff behind sweeping lawn punctuated by sink holes." The house is list in the National Register as part of the Country Estates of River Road (<https://npgallery.nps.gov/NRHP/GetAsset/e3cb67e2-674e-4d1a-82fb-461bffd96c8>). The Olmsted Brothers plans are also online (https://www.flickr.com/photos/olmsted_archives/albums/72157661769868042/with/43930006401/).

The pillars you asked about are not included in the plans, but they are further away from the house than the other features, which are in the plans. The plans are dated 1905 and noted as Olmsted Brothers, so they are not from Frederick Law Olmsted when he planned the parks. He passed in 1903. Olmsted Brothers firm was established by his sons John Charles Olmsted and Frederick Law Olmsted, Jr. prior to their father's death in order to carry on the legacy.

Today, the pillars are located in the designated ROW, so they would be under the purview of Public Works.

Hi Debbie,

I've attached the three bids. Please let me know what you'd like to do. I think the original one from Brick & Stone Masonry is the most reasonable and reputable.

Thanks,
