

Chris is co-owner of Limbwalker Tree Service. He graduated from DuPont Manual Highschool in 1994, earned a Bachelor of Science in Forestry from the University of Kentucky, and a Masters of Forest Resources from Clemson University. His published paper: "Economic Patterns in US Arboriculture" still defines the national arboricultural industry. Chris has been an ISA Certified Arborist® for fifteen years, is a five-time Kentucky tree climbing champion, and a former president of the Kentucky Arborists Association. His newest project is the community tree-planting program Love Louisville Trees, which he started with Louisville Grows in 2013.
