DESIGN SERVICES

Tandoori Fusion, an upscale, fine dining Indian restaurant, is wishing to construct an awning over the existing and currently approved patio space for its restaurant. Tandoori plans to have 80 to 100 indoor dining seats with approximately 30 to 34-person seating on the outdoor patio. The prior occupant of Tandoori space previously utilized the patio for outdoor seating. Tandoori Fusion wishes to upgrade the patio area and provide a covered area which will protect the outdoor diners from the weather and to extend usage of the patio into colder weather by utilizing heaters. The awning proposed is like the awning used at the Brown hotel for its rooftop lounge and the outdoor seating area for Martinis restaurant located at the Paddock Shop. Not only will the awning be an aesthetically pleasing addition to the building but in conjunction with the patio landscaping, the awning will provide additional privacy for diners.

ABOUT TANDOORI FUSION

Tandoori is taking a new approach into the conventional India dining scene by bringing a fine dining experience with authentic Indian cuisine into an otherwise common practice of having an Indian restaurant that favors American dining expectations. With a growing India population in the U.S. and a finer appreciation of authentic culinary experiences Tandoori is filling a gap that currently exists in the region and nationally. This authentic India based cuisine will be complimented by the trend of local and 'farm to table' experiences by sourcing hyper-local ingredients including Indian vegetables grown locally. This combined with authentic Asian-Indian spices and cooking components, including a tandoor oven, imported from India a unique experience is being born

- Imported Asian-Indian spices and tandoor oven
- Fine dining experience
- Farm to table direct local sourcing
- The restaurant will feature many classical Indian dishes but the menu will include influences from other cultures to provide a true fusion experience unlike any other Indian restaurant in this area. The restaurant will also feature special and unusual appetizers some of which are based upon traditional Indian street food offerings.
