Jason,
I found this minor plat for the neighboring property which labels survey markers for the southern property line of our subject site. I have forwarded this plat to the applicant so that they can use the survey pins to determine their front property line and ensure that the new sign will not encroach into the right of way.
Best,
Heather Pollock

Well, maybe. It's hard to tell. Without going out there and wheeling it off, I'm not exactly sure where the ROW line is in relation to those signs.

Jason,
I have a follow up question about this one. When I visited the sign I saw that there was a historical marker sign directly in front of the church's monument sign. Is it possible that this might be the sign identified in the plan below?

Thanks,
Heather

Heather,

As it turns out, the existing sign is just on ROW, per the plan sheet below. If they wish to modify the sign at all, it will have to be moved off of state ROW.

Heather,

Our comments on sign permit requests are always exactly the same: there shall be no commercial signs on the right of way.

If the existing sign is on ROW it can stay unless it is modified in any way, in which case the applicant will need to move it off ROW.

Thanks,

Jason,
I am reviewing a variance request for this proposed church sign and I wanted to make sure there weren't any outstanding concerns before bringing it to a public hearing. The original sign permit came in before I started working on signs and I was wondering if you could forward me any comments you may have had on it. The sign permit was submitted on 3/27/23, the applicant is wanting to replace an existing freestanding monument sign with a taller sign that will have a changing image sign incorporated into it.
Thanks,
Heather
