Per the Healthy Start grant application:

The local evaluation plan will follow the Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) six-step evaluation framework. This evaluation will assess program efficiency and effectiveness through examination of qualitative and quantitative data related to program development and performance. It may involve multiple evaluation types based on what we need to know including: formative/summative, needs assessment, process evaluation, outcome evaluation, quality improvement and system evaluation. The Louisville Metro Healthy Start (LMHS) program local evaluation will track and conduct ongoing monitoring of the program on different aspects: administration, fiscal and contract management, consortium, service delivery, collaboration/partnerships, impact upon both perinatal indicators and on the community, social determinants of health and sustainability.

Process Evaluation Data is gathered from the Healthy Start clients using HS standardized tools and all this data is entered into the REACH database. This database also captures the other process measures such as number of home visits, number of outreach events, number of women recruited through outreach, number of fathers/men in the program and so on. This will allow the evaluator to conduct process evaluation, which includes multiple evaluation questions.

The evaluator will conduct process evaluation using data from REACH, develop a matrix of planned vs. implemented activities, conduct descriptive statistical analysis, and conduct group comparisons regarding participation levels. Ongoing chart and database audits will be done to monitor quality of data collected. A baseline data collection will be done for all indicators to assist in outcome and impact evaluation. Local evaluation will be an integral part of program planning and implementation. Feedback will occur among everyone involved in the evaluation. Valuable feedback will be obtained by holding monthly “data parties” among program administrators to review and discuss data trends and routinely share interim findings, provisional interpretations and draft reports. This will allow HS administration staff to inform learning, decision-making and action. Results of process evaluation will be used to adjust the program.

Both, program activities and health outcomes will be considered and analyzed in the same time, and the program goals and objectives will become the guiding factor in establishing the evaluation design to be utilized. To assure the internal validity, a case-control study design will be used to compare the individuals within the Healthy Start project area enrolled and receiving project culturally competent services with those in the same area who did not participate in Healthy Start project. Clients who did not participate in the Healthy Start program will function as a natural control group since they will likely be matched on significant demographic and socio-economic characteristics with those who did receive the culturally sensitive services.

Short-term Outcome Evaluation Short-term and intermediate evaluation questions for all benchmarks are addressed in the grant work plan.

Long-term Outcomes and Impact Evaluation

Outcome evaluation will be done by validating the REACH Case Management database. The data will be matched against the State Vital Statistics birth files. Although the vital statistics office for the state has been very helpful in supplying data files to us, there is a considerable delay in getting even interim birth and death certificate files that can be searched electronically from them. It is expected that matching data that exists in the REACH database and the vital statistics files will not be done during the year the data is collected, but rather 1 to 2 years after the fact.

The evaluation will be utilization-focused in that stakeholders will always be involved in providing feedback. The evaluation methods used will include – focus groups with Healthy Start staff and participants; key informant interviews with critical stakeholders such as community champion, CAN leader/members, HS participant, HS management, HS resource persons; creation of a resources linkage map to understand the system that the program is housed and implemented within; developing a logic model with stakeholder participation and feedback. Data analysis for impact/outcome evaluation will include basic descriptive analysis, qualitative analysis, longitudinal analysis of key identified outcomes over time, advanced statistical analysis and GIS analysis of outcomes by geographic area. Outcome and process data will be compared to explain key findings or trends identified.
