Felony Job Search Tips

Getting a job in today's market takes more than just a well-composed resume - it takes creativity, intelligence and persistence to find the perfect position and to be hired for it. However, though finding a job isn't always easy, it can be if you search with MyJobCentral.com. Here are some tips for conducting a better job search for Felony jobs.

Use Multiple Searches

New positions open up all the time, whether you're looking for a career or just a part-time job to earn some extra money. When searching for a job, it's important to perform multiple job searches to make sure that you're aware of all positions that meet your criteria. If you're beginning to look for a new job, perform job searches multiple times each week to ensure that no stone is left unturned when it comes to finding the perfect position.

Network

One of the best ways to find out about open positions is to ask your friends, family and professional acquaintances if their employers currently have any openings. This is because companies often tell current employees about openings and ask them to spread the word to people who they think would be a good fit for the job. In addition, some companies simply don't advertise their job openings as much as others. Other great ways to network include alumni associations, job fairs, and local community events.

Federal Bond for convicted felons

What the Federal Bonding Program is:

It is a federal tool, to help a job applicant, obtain employment, and keep it. The program issues Fidelity Bonds, and is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Labor.

What a Fidelity Bond is:

Fidelity Bond, through the federal bonding program, is a business insurance policy, that will protect the employer from theft, or property damage, from a dishonest employee. It is a "guarantee," that the new employee, will be an honest worker. The Fidelity Bonds issued under the Federal Bonding Program are insurance policies of the Travelers Casualty and Surety Company of America. The McLaughlin Company in Washington, DC, is the agent for Travelers in managing the program nationwide.

This Bond Can Help You Get Employed:

If you are an ex-offender (Felony, Misdemeanor), or you have a high risk factor, in your background, this bond is given freely, to the employer, as an incentive to hire you. The employer can then hire you, and utilize your skills, without taking a risk, or you being dishonest, while working there.

What The Bond Insurance Covers: 6 months

The bond insures the employer, in case of embezzlement, larceny, forgery, or theft. It does not cover job injuries, or poor workmanship.

How To Get Federally Bonded:

You must receive a job offer first, and the employer has to have a date for you to start working for them. The Fidelity Bond insurance policy will then be issued to the employer, from The McLaughlin Company, of Washington, DC, underwritten through the Travelers Insurance Company. While your local workforce representative, usually informs employers, there are still many that don't know of the federal bonding program. Make sure to inform the employer about this federal program.

Bond Coverage Amount:

The bond covers $ 5,000, with no cost to you, or the employer, and no deductible. Employers can apply for larger bond amounts, if necessary.

Kentucky Division of Probation and Parole Jefferson County Employment Resource Guide

Purpose: In an effort to assist individuals with felony convictions in their quest to obtain gainful employment, a collection of resources has been provided in this guide. Though this resource guide is designed toward individuals with felony convictions, it can serve others with misdemeanor convictions quite well. This inventory is compiled from government agencies, individuals and non-profit faith-based organizations, as well as the personal knowledge and experience of others. Individuals and organizations are encouraged to share this resource guide. Also, the information provided is not meant to be a comprehensive list but rather a list to be updated and edited as new resources are discovered, developed or if portions become outdated.

“Nobody would hire me, if they only knew, of my bad Choices.”

First Impression for a
Second Chance

It is difficult to look an employer in the eye and talk about your criminal history. However, in today's world many employers are willing to hire people with felony and misdemeanor convictions, if they are honest and upfront about their past. People that have found jobs in spite of their criminal history agree with this perspective:

Oh! Nobody

“We found out that telling the truth about our criminal history made it easier, for us to interview for a job because there was “NO” need to make up other lies to avoid the truth.”

The way you talk about our legal record can make a big difference.

In order to hire you, employers say that they need to believe that you have changed your life for the better. There are four things that you should remember when talking to employers about your record:

1. Be honest and upfront. Look the employer in the eye and tell them about your conviction(s). For example, you might say: “In 2010, I was convicted of fraud, possession, and selling drugs.”
2. Let the employer know you are willing to take responsibility for what you did, but keep it brief. For example, “I regret the things I did and how I hurt so many people.”
3. Explain how your life is different now. For example, I have a mentor that gives me support”, I’ve been clean for over a year, because I want to focus on getting ahead”, I’ve been going to church, I’ve been volunteering, food pantries because it make me feel good, knowing I am helping others and giving back to the community.
4. Talk to the employer about reasons why you will be a good employee. “I have experience as an assembler and I am very reliable. At my last job, I only missed one day of work in 11 months.”

“In our experience, it’s important to come clean, admit to your mistakes and then tell the employer what you have learned from the experience and why you will behave differently in the future.”

List your skills, past work, and/or the jobs you have held. (include all work experience, even work in prison)

Now think about your good qualities as a person - characteristics that an employer would like. For example, has anyone ever told you, you have great people skills? That you’re reliable, because you always show up on time? That you are calm in stressful situations?

Read the following to see how you would explain your history:

Example 1) I have a charge of possession of drugs on my record. I have made some bad choices in my life. I’ve successfully completed a drug rehabilitation program and I am currently working with an employment specialist to help me find paid employment. I would never use drugs that would affect my ability to do my job. I have experience working with the public and previous employers told me that I have great customer service skills.

Example 2) When I was younger I was arrested for burglary. I am extremely remorseful and I understand that I made a poor choice. I am a changed person. I have driven and I have not committed any crimes since then. I am currently a volunteer at the local kitchen and I am very involved in my community. I am a hard worker. I’ve always been a person who wanted to work and I never complain on the job.

Finally, write your statement that you will use to talk to employer about your past.
State your conviction(s):

Express regret/take responsibility for your past choices.

Explain how your life is different now.

Tell the employer why you will be a good employee.

Prodigal Ministries, Inc. - www.prodigalky.org

Jennifer Partin, Program Director (Women's program) 502-749-9194
Tom Mlugavin, Community Director (Men's program) 502-588-9096 Prodigal Ministries has been described as the cutting edge for offender reentry programming and having a "holistic approach" to assisting felons. The Prodigal staff can realistically address prison aftercare because of their combined previous experience with the Kentucky Department of Corrections. Our staff has over 85 years of experience and over 10 years of establishment within the community, which includes over 5 years of residential programming. They have assisted the KY-DOC with pre-release services within the prisons for parolees and inmates who have served their entire sentence. Prodigal Ministries trains church members and volunteers to help offenders prior to release and after their release into the community. This instills a disciplined, spiritual lifestyle that makes transitioning easier in terms of housing, family issues, addictions, employment, medical and mental health.
