100 Black Men of Louisville	C.O.R.E. Community/Career Orientations, Resources & Exploration Program: provide job shadowing opportunities, job coaching services, and business writing portfolio development. Workshop style program will address participants' needs for targeted learning modules to explore interests, develop 'soft' skills, develop metacognitive skills, and build job-specific literacy through employee handbook reviews, associated career vocabulary, and guest speakers.
2Not1 Fatherhood and Families, Inc.	The Blueprint Program is designed to look at the self and develop strategies to successfully deal with life obstacles by focusing on personal development. Emphasis will be placed on youth observing their own behavior and learning techniques that will help them look at 'what role they play' in various situations
Academy of Music Production Education and Development (AMPED)	The Technology Project Model introduces youth to a chosen field of technology and provides 8 weeks of training in that field. Trainees choose a related philanthropic project to work on. Programming is designed to encourage college attendance and incorporates in the training an introduction to career planning and college selection process, support with completing the college application process, and identifies skills needed for college success. Parent sessions provide adults with tips about the benefits of post-secondary education and how they can support their children in achieving the goal of post-secondary education.
Americana Community Center	Youth programs are designed to provide refugee, immigrant, and low-income youth with diverse, meaningful opportunities for academic and personal development to ensure success in school and life. Programming supports their achievement in school with core components including English as a Second Language (ESL), literacy, arts, recreation, environmental education, computer literacy, healthy lifestyles, and science/math. Teens also focus on life and leadership skills by participating in teen leadership and youth coaching.
Allan Houston Foundation/Big Brothers Big Sisters Mentoring Initiative	Allan Houston Mentoring Initiative is a unique combination of basketball clinics, relationship-building and personal development activities that support effective mentoring relationships. Youth will be identified and referred to the program by parents, caregivers and community partners. Risk factors may be growing up in a single parent household, residing in one of the targeted neighborhoods, or having a parent in prison. Mentors will provide social, physical, and mental engagement to keep youth active and out of trouble.
Auto Club for Kids	After school program for youth 14-18. Provide participants with automotive training, allowing them to earn a certificate in auto mechanics. Participants will also learn communication skills and community building/outreach. Progress will be monitored through weekly progress reports on academics and behavior, and maintain contact with parents and teachers on child's progress through the program with weekly open community sessions.

Bridge Kids/Roots and Wings	Using arts and culture strategies, youth will examine and identify the residual effects of violence, engage in personal and community healing through expression, and access their own power as they develop smart, creative solutions that youth can implement themselves to change their lives and communities. 8-10 youth and young adults from the Zones of Hope neighborhoods will present their community based project designed to decrease violence at an international web based conference.
Center for Women and Families: PACT in Action	Funding will expand current violence prevention efforts targeting the California neighborhood and support the Prevention Team in preparing for implementation of bystander intervention programming at school. Many students involved with PACT in Action report not feeling empowered to stopping violence witnessed in the school. This new programming focus will help develop previous street level bystander intervention for the school setting.
Family and Children's Place: PAL Coalition and Family Stabilization Programs	Programs which work to reduce substance abuse by young people living in the 7 th street corridor. Programming uses a strengths-based approach to prevention, responding to changing community needs and directly involves community members to develop and implement prevention activities. The Bridge Mentors Project will pair teens from the Zones of Hope neighborhoods who are experiencing poverty, injustice, and instability with young adults who have also experienced similar challenges.
Hope by Hope	The mission is to empower young adults and expose them to more opportunities, resources, and community awareness. Programming will focus on building community engagement skills, emphasizing the importance of employment by learning different trades, college readiness trips, job shadowing, interview simulations, college prep courses, soft skills lessons, Students will practice self-control through hands-on games, trainings, and written assignments.
Kentucky Museum of Art and Craft (KMAC)	ArtsReach Safe Space at KMAC will be an after-school open art studio providing 3 hours of guided or self-directed visual art making for youth ages 14-24. Tiny Art Tales is a weekly one hour experience showing parents ways to use story, movement, music, and art to develop kindergarten readiness and pre-literacy skills.
Kentucky Shakespeare Festival: Teaching Tolerance	Teaching Tolerance and Conflict Resolution Through The Arts is a series of workshops and performance designed to foster community and develop emotional life skills for young people. Through exploring the text of Shakespeare, participants learn tolerance and peaceful resolution to conflict.
Kristy Love Foundation (KLF)	The KLF is a recovery house and program for survivors of human trafficking to help them become productive members of society. Programming includes housing, case management, household/program structure, peer mentoring, employment support, and access to resources. The intention is to help participants leave prostitution and drugs, maintain sobriety and employment, increase personal and financial stability, and restore family and other positive community-based connections.
Life Development Center (LDC)	The LDC provides programming for youth and families and community initiatives that readily address community needs and reduce community violence. The Men of Value and Excellence (M.O.V.E.) and Ladies of Value and Excellence (L.O.V.E.) Leadership Academy is designed to inspire civic engagement and social justice praxis among youth by developing spiritual, mental, emotional, financial, and physical fitness through science, technology, engineering and math.

Michael White Kentucky Recovery Center	Programs will provide inpatient, outpatient, counseling, education, job training, and career services by providing education, prevention and intervention and continuing self-help groups for addicts, alcoholics, and their families.
Stand Up Louisville: Freedom Academy	Focus of Freedom Academy is to provide community organizing skills through black liberated ideology. Participants will indulge and identify the issues presented to themselves and community, learn organizing skills to address, organize, and produce an action-oriented solution based program, and fundraise to build their program.
Tailored and Tied to Succeed	Address underemployment and unemployment of black men by providing them with work readiness programming and soft skills training to help develop key pathways as they move from never having employment to transitioning back into the workforce and/or boosting confidence needed for self-employment.
Who's Next Elite Basketball	Offer at-risk youth an outlet to deter them from juvenile crime and other deviant behaviors through building character, teamwork, and citizenship. Will address suicide, violence, substance abuse, and bullying using a public health model and upstream prevention.
YMCA Safe Place	Three main programs will consist of: Street Outreach-outreach workers will visit sites where youth may congregate and engage in conversations about their needs, let them know of available resources, and offer food and snacks; Community Outreach- targeted outreach to youth and adults to improve general awareness of programs and how to access them; New Safe Place Sites-add an additional 2 sites at St. Stephens church and Community Center.
