The following spoke to this item:

- Council Member Hollander
- Committee Member Chambers Armstrong
- Committee Member Triplett
- Vice Chair Reed
- Committee Member Arthur
- Chair Flood
- Council Member Ackerson

The following was discussed:

Council Member Hollander stated that there was no reference to the term "economic hardship" in the hearing nor an argument that this met the criteria for a economic hardship. He also stated there was no documentation called for in the written standard guidelines that were published on the website for meeting an economic hardship exemption and guidelines for demolition. He also stated the applicant made a decision not to seek an economic hardship exemption.

- The current owner of the Nelson Distillery Warehouse placed the building on National Registry of Historic Preservation
- Question about how the Metro Council is reviewing landmark cases
- Question whether this Resolution should be before the Metro Council
- Questions and concerns about the structure integrity of the building and the occupancy
- Questions about whether the building has been vacant since the 1970's
- There is a process in the Landmarks Ordinance for properties that are designated landmarks to file an application for demolition and submit the economic hardship to go to the Architecture Review Committee, and if it is turned down, it would then go to the Landmarks Commission to be presented
  - Question about whether the letter from the engineering firm about the structure building carries any weight
  - Question and concerns about people landmarking other people's property
  - Question and concerns about the Landmark Commission's decision and whether Metro Council has to abide by those decisions
  - Question about whether the interior ventilation, the whiskey barrel racks, and the fire safety was the reason the Nelson Distillery Warehouse was put on the National Registry of Historic Preservation
  - Questions and concerns about the administrative law principles and recognition of the procedure and the decision that was made
  - Question regarding whether there has been a landmark designation over the objection of the owner since the Metro Council gave itself the authority to reverse landmark decisions that has not been overturned by the Metro Council
  - In 2012, the Cavalier building in Portland was a petition oriented designation they initiated the process to overturn at Metro Council, but the property owner

reached an agreement with the neighborhood and the Metro Council chose not to go forward with the review
 - Also, a property on Broadway at the corner of Baxter that was petition oriented designation that did not go forward with the Metro Council review because the deadline was missed
