We are concerned with drainage issues. This is a hilly neighborhood and he has shoved a lot of ground around already with a bobcat, alarming some of the neighbors. Most of the time now, everything drains ok. However when we get heavy rains some of the ditches in front of homes can get pretty high.

I took from the notification we received about the requested waiver that the proposed structure would be larger than the original dwelling. That's a bit concerning if I understood that correctly. Will the structure be one story only? How large are we talking about here? I'd hate to see the pretty neighborhood changed with an overly large garage.

I guess if he were supervised, and professionals ensure that drainage would work out for his neighbors, it would be ok. I know for a fact that other neighbors are concerned, not just me.

Thank you for replying. I look forward to any response you can share based on my comments.
